TESTING YOUR CANISTER

Canisters have a shelf life of approximately two years from time of purchase. Check your date of purchase and test canister for pressure. Test for pressure every four to six months—press firmly with your thumb on the trigger for one half second. (Test outdoors with the wind behind you.) The canister should have plenty of pressure. Look inside this newsletter for our new models. If your canister is over 2 years old or doesn't spray, we recommend that you order a new canister

WE OFFER QUALITY PRODUCTS

PRODUCTS PAGE

If you need a new canister, or would like to try a different model, you can confidently purchase from us. Commercially purchased canisters are probably cheaper than our canisters and you may think that you are getting a good deal. But are you? There is no quality control on pepper/tear gas products. The market is full of cheap products of questionable quality. Most commercial pepper shoots as a stream. Did you know that for pepper to be effective, you need to spray directly into the open eyes? Is there enough chemical in the canister to test it when you first buy it and then every four to six months? Would there be anything left if you needed to use it to ward off an attack? Do you trust the product to defend your life? You can buy a cheap product, or you can invest in a quality product from us. We have 5 sizes. The smallest canister is Pen-14; it looks like a marker pen and is easy to conceal; The CY-35 is for bicyclists. We carry AD 25, AD 50 and HM 80. I personally carry AD-50. It is compact, holds a lot of spray, and shoots up to 15 feet. A safety holster with belt clip is available.

Our Proprietary Aerosol Defense Spray

- 3-in-1 formulation takes effect immediately & produces a more intense effect than pepper or CS only. Spray Contains UV dye for suspect identification
- Combines both an irritant (CS Military Tear Gas) and an inflammatory (Oleoresin Capsicum/Red Pepper) to produce a blended formulation, which is superior to all single ingredient defense sprays.
